

They are not related, just bound by interest. Once a year they become family to share their memories in the most unlikely of places: a movie theatre! If you ever wondered what "Widescreen Weekend" is all about, this brand new documentary may give you all the answers you need. Mostly filmed during 2013's "Widescreen Weekend" at the National Media Museum in Bradford (UK), Wolfram Hannemann's short film concentrates not just on the people running the festival, but on some of the regular delegates as well - characters you may have already bumped into when attending the festival. As you will find they are all lovely and very knowledgeable enthusiasts, who not only take the chance to watch old films in the best possible way, but also to have discussions with other enthusiasts about films in general and widescreen formats in particular. Come and join this unique family gathering!

Bonus Features:

- Director Wolfram Hannemann's introduction at the film's world premiere in Bradford(UK)
- Original Trailer

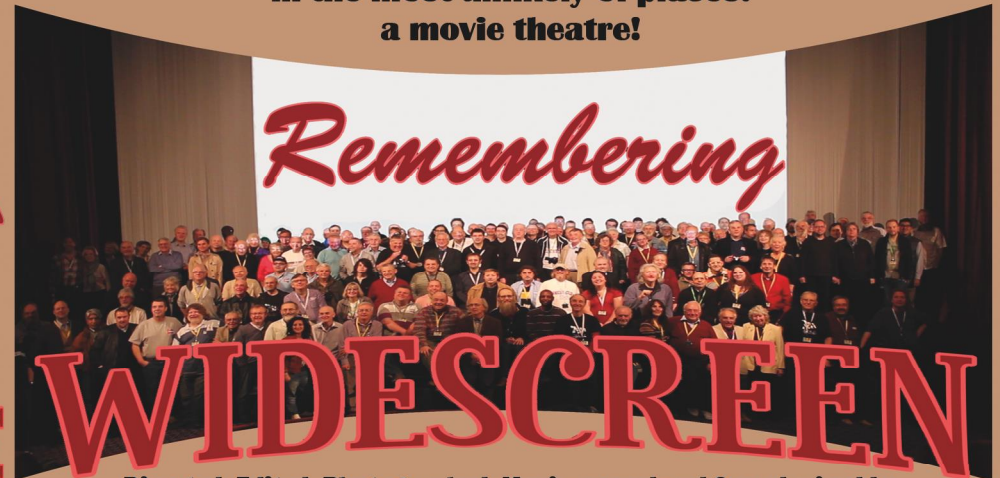

REMEMBERING WIDESCREEN
 Germany 2014 / 37mins / Not Rated
 Original English version
 (c) 2014 by www.laserhotline.de
 All rights reserved

For more information contact info@wolframhannemann.de or wh@laserhotline.de

Remembering WIDESCREEN

They are not related, just bound by interest.
 But once a year they become family
 to share their memories
 in the most unlikely of places:
 a movie theatre!

Directed, Edited, Photographed, Music scored and Sound mixed by WOLFRAM HANNEMANN

„We now have a wonderful record of the Widescreen Weekend!“

Mark Lyndon, MBKS, Writer & Broadcaster

„It's a little piece of Widescreen Weekend history. So proud to be part of it!“

Tony Earnshaw, Film Journalist

„Es geht hier um Menschen, ...um das Leuchten in den Augen der Zuschauer“

Thomas Klingensmaier, Kulturredakteur Stuttgarter Zeitung

